

MoMo Movement Manifesto

This manifesto is based on the ideas of Nelson Mandela (1918 - 2013) about the importance of education for peace and reconciliation and for escaping a life of ignorance and poverty. Mandela recognized education as the means to enable equal opportunities in the world.

Nelson Mandela's Quotes:

It is not beyond our power to create a world where all children have access to quality education. Those who do not believe this have a small imagination.

I have cherished the ideal of a democratic and free society in which all people live together in harmony and with equal opportunities.

Education is the most powerful weapon you can use to change the world.

The power of education extends beyond developing the skills we need for economic success. It can contribute to nation building and reconciliation.

A good head and a good heart are always a formidable combination. But if you add a literate tongue or pen to that, you have something very special.

Young people must take it upon themselves to ensure they receive the highest possible education so that they can properly represent us as future leaders in the future.

Without language one cannot talk to people and understand them; one cannot share their hopes and aspirations, understand their history, appreciate their poetry or enjoy their songs.

No country can really develop without training its citizens.

Education is the great engine of personal development. It is through education that a farmer's daughter can become a doctor, that a miner's son can become mine chief, that a farmworker's child can become president of a great nation. It is what we do with what we have, not what is given to us, that separates one person from another.
